FMC YEAR-END REPORT

Each year Fort Mason has grown in the quality of its program and organizations, public attendance at its events, national and international acclaim as a model for converting underutilized buildings, and in public support. Last year was no exception to this record of achievement. In fact, 1986 was Fort Mason's best year in each of these measurements.

Program
Last year featured the following as examples of the continued development of Fort Mason's program.

- Magic Theatre celebrated its 20th anniversary to great critical acclaim as it announced an outstanding season and a fund drive for equipment, program and endowment purposes.

- Life on the Water inaugurated its new 240-seat theater in Building B with an exciting season opening, a sold-out run by storyteller Spalding Gray.

- The Mexican Museum had several outstanding exhibitions, capped by the opening in November of The Nelson A. Rockefeller Collection of Mexican Folk Art.

- The Oceanic Society continued its resurgence as an educational resource relating to San Francisco Bay, Delta and related water issues.

- City Celebration was selected for the Business/Arts Award by the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce for their contribution to the Bay Area arts community. It was the second consecutive year that a Fort Mason organization received the award, as BALA won it in 1985.

- The Ploughshares Fund gained in national recognition as the foremost funder of peace research and educational work.

- Young Performers Theatre established residency at Fort Mason after more than a year of producing children's plays here, and announced its five-play 1986-87 season.

- New events such as the Israeli Expo, the highly successful Landscape Garden Show, the Reggae Festival and Imai: Artist in Nature premiered at Fort Mason, and the highly-acclaimed Pacific States Craftfair returned to Fort Mason in 1986.

International Acclaim
In addition to hosting representatives of many U.S. cities which are hoping to draw on Fort Mason's successful work over the past ten years, representatives from Japan, Spain, Colombia, Argentina, El Salvador, Canada, the Sudan and others visited in the hopes of taking ideas on how to start a Fort Mason back to their own countries.

At-Fort-Mason Capital Campaign
Fundraising: Significantly, the Board of Directors and our Campaign Committee, headed by Myron Du Bain and Jerrold L. Kingsley, announced a major campaign designed to raise the funds necessary to make major improvements and create new facilities at Fort Mason. You may have read about the success this campaign has experienced in recent articles in these pages. However, it bears repeating that local and national foundations and corporations have pledged $3.3 million towards our $4 million Phase I goal, and we are very optimistic about reaching the goal in the coming months. At the same time, we will be announcing a Phase II goal in the very near future.

Renovations: This will enable us in the coming months to begin construction on three very exciting projects—the Exhibition Hall in Pier 2, the 400-seat Bayfront Theater in Pier 2, and the Festival Pavilion in Pier 3.

As wonderful as all of this is, 1987 promises to be our most exciting year. We will complete the renovations on these three projects, attempt to achieve major improvements in the parking lot and on the grounds, and move on to plans for Landmark Buildings C and D. We will host the first events in our new facilities, and continue the work of making Fort Mason an integral part of the Bay Area's cultural, educational and recreational life, and a model for other communities.

We hope you will continue to participate, produce, and contribute to San Francisco's regional cultural center by the Bay: Fort Mason.

Peace and health to you in 1987.

MAGIC THEATRE'S 20TH ANNIVERSARY

Magic Theatre's John Lion.

Fort Mason's internationally famous Magic Theatre has opened its 20th anniversary season with the announcement that founder/general director John Lion has been awarded the prestigious Margo Jones Award for 1986. The national award is made annually to the artistic director and theater, which, in the opinion of the judges, "has made the most significant contribution to the dramatic art" through the production of new plays.

In 1987 Magic Theatre will continue with its philosophy of generating substantial new work by both established and emerging playwrights. January will see the premiere of "Roshi," a new play by Lynne Kaufman, who wrote last year's smash hit "The Couch"; "True Beauties" will open in February; a revival of Michael McClure's "The Beard" will begin in March; a West Coast premiere of "Between East and West," the story of an immigrant couple pursuing the American dream in New York City, opens in April; and a new play by Alan Bowne, author of "Sharon and Billy," will play in May. Don't miss out on history in the making. Call the Magic Theatre at 441-8001 for information on performance schedules and ticket prices.

LIFE ON THE WATER

Many changes are going on at what used to be the People's Theater Coalition. They are in the process of extensive renovations which will upgrade the theater in Building B into a more flexible performance space that will seat up to 270 people. But more importantly, they have a new name and a new artistic direction. According to Executive Director Joe Lambert, Life On The Water, as the theater is now called, is still dedicated to presenting material that has a social, political and ethnic focus, but they will also be seeking a "more contemporary artistic perspective." With the help of co-founders Bill Talen, Ellen Sebastian and Leonard Pitt, Life On The Water will be presenting an ambitious first season. In January there will be a world premiere of "Beyond Detroit," a new play by Michelle Linfante; in March, a new performance collaboration by Leonard Pitt and Rinde Eckert entitled "Not For Real"; April brings a new collective piece, "The Texans," performed by a group of Lubbock natives that includes rock musician Joe Ely; and in June the Chicano company, El Teatro de la Esperanza, performs a new work. Call Life On The Water at 885-2790 for performance times and season subscription information.
